Amy Biehl High School is creating a partnership with Facing History and Ourselves, an international organization that got its start creating curriculum for holocaust studies. It now has branched into developing curriculum around restorative/transitional justice curriculum and bases its work on research in South Africa, Bosnia, Northern Ireland and other places moving toward democracy.

In FY 2006, the high school provided funding for staff development. Plans, in the next fiscal year, are to develop New Mexico-based curriculum that can be disseminated to a wider audience. A likely topic will be Land Grants as well as others.
